PART I: A RESEARCH GUIDE

THE TRANS COLLECTIONS GUIDE: A RESEARCH GUIDE FOR EXPLORING TRANS HISTORIES AT THE ARQUIVES: CANADA'S LGBTQ2+ ARCHIVES

This collection guide is intended to help researchers locate trans-related holdings in The ArQuives: Canada's LGBTQ2+ Archives.

In PART I, the guide provides information about The ArQuives, and some guidance for the exploration of trans histories documented in the archives' holdings. In PART II, the guide showcases the breadth and depth of holdings in the following areas:

- Archival Records (personal and organizational): Personal papers of LGBTQ2+ individuals and the records of LGBTQ2+ organizations.
- Audio-Visual Materials—Sound Recordings (music, oral histories, and event recordings): reel-to-reel, vinyl LPs, 33s and 45s; audiocassettes; digital media. The ArQuives collects all genres including, but not limited to, commercially produced music, oral histories, radio broadcasts, and recordings of events or political protests.
- LGBTQ2+ Periodicals Collection: All publications of a serial nature (intended to appear on an on-going, though sometimes irregular basis and in which each issue is normally dated or numbered sequentially). Includes magazines, periodicals, newsletters, newspapers, annual reports, and like publications.
- Vertical Files: These files contain published material relating to a particular person, organization or event. There are Canadian, American, and International Vertical Files. The formats include, but are not limited to: press clippings, flyers, brochures, announcements, invitations, advertisements, broadsides, reprints of articles, and ephemera.

While these areas were carefully searched in the creation of this guide, this should not be taken as a comprehensive list (i.e., there are certainly more materials beyond what has been listed here). Please check with an archivist to identify further materials.

In addition to the materials listed above, researchers might consider looking in the following:

- The James Fraser Library: The Library collects fiction and non-fiction publications. The emphasis is on Canadian content and presses of a LGBTQ2+ nature or mandate, and/or where the writer is part of the LGBTQ2+ community. The ArQuives collects non-Canadian works as well, however, non-Canadian fiction published after 1985 is only collected from from small or independent presses.
- Audio-Visual Materials: Films and Video Recordings. Films (8 mm, 16 mm, etc. with or without soundtracks); filmstrips; videocassettes (VHS and Beta formats, NTSC); videodiscs (laserdiscs and DVDs); digital media. The collection is divided into five sections, documentary, entertainment, and erotica, PSA/commercial, and instructional. This includes but is not limited to: films, documentaries, footage recorded from television programs, home videos, PSAs and instructional footage, b-roll, original productions, and erotica.
- Graphic Materials (photographs and posters): These holdings include prints, negatives, slides, contact sheets, colour transparencies, other photographic materials including digital images, and posters produced by and that document LGBTQ2+ people and communities in all their variety.
- Artifacts: These are artifacts produced by and that document LGBTQ2+ people and communities in all their variety. This includes, but is not limited to: t-shirts, buttons and pins, matchbook covers, banners and flags, uniforms, and leather gear. The emphasis is on Canadian items.
- Works of Art: Paintings, photographs, sculptures, drawings, and other creative works that are created by or have historical and cultural significance for LGBTQ2+ Canada. For details, see the Art Collection Policy, currently under revision.

Please note that The ArQuives Acquisition Policy was most recently approved by the Board of Directors in November 2016. Researchers are encouraged to ask for a copy in order to learn what The ArQuives collects in more detail. Please note that an updated version of the Acquisition Policy will become available in late 2020. Feel free to contact The ArQuives (queeries@arquives.ca) for further information or feedback.

HOW TO LOCATE AND REQUEST TRANS MATERIALS AT THE ARQUIVES

SEARCHING THE COLLECTIONS FROM OFFSITE

The bulk of our archival holdings and collections are currently searchable online through our Digital Collections Portal arquivos.andornot.com. Researchers are encouraged to start there. To use the database, do a keyword search, and then if desired you can filter on the left-hand side of the screen to revise your search results by collection, decade, material type, description level, etc. Once you have found a record you are interested in, select it within the record by clicking on 'more details' and then 'select'. These selections will be added to 'your selections' at the top right hand side of the page, which can be exported as a PDF or emailed directly to the Reference Archivist at queeries@arquivos.ca. The archivist monitoring the email will respond to you within seven business days regarding your request. Other questions about the archival collections, donating, or visiting, can also be directed here. The ArQuives asks for researchers to send their requests in advance of visiting as the majority of the archives records are not housed on site and need to be retrieved. How expeditiously the archivist can retrieve your materials will depend on the quantity and where they are located.

Material held by The ArQuives is open to the public; however some collections may have restrictions based on individuals' privacy, donor specific restrictions, and/or the condition of the material. The archivist will outline these for you prior to your perusal. You can also see these listed in the database record.

If you are unable to conduct research during our Public Service hours at 34 Isabella Street, Toronto, The ArQuives now offers research assistance remotely for a fee. Research will commence once labour is arranged, and the results will be sent once payment is received. Please check the website for current public service hours and research fees.

REGISTERING AS A RESEARCHER

Researchers must first register with the archives and purchase a reader card (a low annual or per visit fee, which may be waived in some circumstances). The registration experience helps researchers familiarize themselves with the policies and procedures of the archives. Archivists will provide information on the following:

- Reading Room rules (i.e. no liquids, food, pens, backpacks, high-powered cameras, or scanners)
- How to handle fragile materials
- How to respect any access restrictions stipulated by the donors of the materials or archivist
- How to track fonds accessed for citations and future retrievals
- How to handle copyright for reproduction/publication
- What specific types of files are, i.e. what kind of collection they are from, a personal fonds or a vertical file etc.
- How to request assistance with accessing materials at The ArQuives.

To register, researchers can do so in person during Public Service hours (available on the website), via cash or card, or pay online in advance of their visit here.

Note: The second floor of The ArQuives is not fully accessible. If you have additional questions or concerns, or to read our full accessibility statement, please contact us at queries@arquives.ca or at (416) 777-2755.

RESEARCH SERVICES

The ArQuives offers two types of research services:

(1) In Person: Researchers may visit the archives in person during Public Service hours: Tuesday to Thursday from 6:30 to 9:00pm and Fridays from 1:00 to 5:00pm. Researchers can contact the archives directly to inquire as to whether there is availability to request an appointment outside of regular Public Service hours.

(2) Remote Research: Researchers who are unable to visit The ArQuives in person may request that an archivist conduct research on their behalf. Remote research services are based on labour available. The ArQuives charges a fee per hour for this service: visit The ArQuives' website or contact queries@arquives.ca to enquire about remote research services and request a fee structure. All researchers must be registered with The ArQuives.

Although Vertical Files, some library materials, photographs, and some personal and organizational collections are available on-site, researchers should note that most of The ArQuives' archival collections are stored off-site. If you request Audio-Visual materials you may not be able to listen or watch it immediately, depending on the physical state of the media. Due to budget and labour limitations, any costs associated with the digitization will be the responsibility of the researcher. The ArQuives therefore asks that researchers to send their reference request in as far in advance as possible.

SEARCHING FOR TRANS: CLASSIFICATION AND CATALOGUING CHALLENGES

Searching for trans histories at The ArQuives reveals several challenges (and opportunities!) related to the ways in which both library and archival material is traditionally organized and described. Like all archives, The ArQuives organizes its archival holdings by provenance. This means that they are organized around the people or organizations that produced or donated the records. In using provenance, The ArQuives follows Canadian archival theory and enables it to emphasize how the creator conducted their work or engaged in the activities documented by the records; provenancial arrangement is also the only feasible way to arrange collections that have multiple and intersecting subjects, which does not allow for easy description by category. Researchers are therefore encouraged to do some background research to learn the names of individuals, groups, or historical events to help guide their explorations through The ArQuives' archival collections.

Alternatively, researchers may begin their explorations with The ArQuives' Vertical Files: files that contain miscellaneous material received from a variety of sources and which has not been maintained as a part of archival donations. The Vertical Files are organized by individuals, organizations, and events; the files include newspaper articles, press clippings and articles, brochures, flyers, form letters and other single sheet printed items. (Archival material such as correspondence, handwritten notes, minutes of meetings, diaries, etc. are kept with the appropriate fonds.) Vertical Files are particularly useful for documenting the early years of the LGBT liberation movements, as the items therein often constitute the only surviving material. Vertical Files are a good jumping off for research, and are a relatively under-utilized source of information about trans histories.

One of the challenges facing any trans library is which organizing system to use: all of them present some challenges in classifying trans material. The ArQuives' James Fraser Library uses a classification system specifically designed for LGBT libraries that is continually being refined, using library terminology adapted from the Sears List of Subject Headings; the subject headings provided by Homodoc in its first and second editions of Homosaurus: An International Thesaurus of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Index Terms; and the cataloguing rules laid out in AACR2 and successors.

The changing nature of terminology is also important to consider when conducting historical research. That is, the terms that we use to describe certain identities and experiences have changed over time, and the introduction of new terminology by archivists and librarians is often a little behind what is popular at any one moment; older terminology may not necessarily be replaced as quickly as one would like, due to the volunteer time needed to make changes. In some cases, words that are offensive and/or in little use today--such as transvestite rather than cross-dresser--remain in the catalogue records to avoid the censorship of history where these descriptors were historically accurate in the time that the record was produced, and used by the community itself. In this way, metadata (or, data about data) is itself a historical artifact that can be important to some researchers. Offensive terms such as "tranny" or "shemale" appear in searches only in the titles of publications or names of organizations and events, not in the subject headings.

Various Buttons, Mirha-Soleil Ross fonds.

The term "Two Spirit" provides a good example of how search terms can be complicated, especially in the context of a mostly volunteer organization where cataloguing terms are not always uniform. It is also important to note that archivists will replicate the way Two Spirit(ed)/2-spirit(ed)/2S is written on the archival record, another reason why there is a variety of terms in the database. For example, a search for "Two Spirit" in The ArQuives databases yields 130 entries, while a search for "2-spirit" brings up 94 records. It is for this reason that researchers are urged to connect with volunteer archivists who know the collections well; they can help steer researchers towards the material they are looking for. Researchers are encouraged to search using terms that may have been in use when the material was originally catalogued.

Keywords that have been used by The ArQuives include:

- trans, trans*
- transgender, transgendered, transgenderism
- transsexual, tranny
- transvestite, transvestism
- crossdresser
- MtoF, FtoM, MtF, FtM, male-to-female, female-to-male
- shemale
- drag, drag queen
- Two Spirit, Two Spirited, 2-Spirit
- hermaphrodite
- transitioning
- voice therapy
- transphobia
- gender dysphoria
- gender alignment surgery, top surgery, sex change surgery (procedure)
- gender identity, gender expression, gender diversity, non-binary

The materials identified here represent a significant amount of relevant material to researchers exploring trans histories, but this list is not comprehensive. Researchers are encouraged to work with a reference archivist to mine for additional materials that may not be explicitly identified as either “trans” or “drag” etc.

SELECT THEMES AND COLLECTIONS OVERVIEW

Researchers interested in exploring trans histories at The ArQuives may have clear research goals or alternatively, may wish to begin their investigations more broadly. This section provides some guidance on themes that researchers can build on, as well as an overview of some of the collections that will be relevant to this research.

RESEARCH BY HOLDINGS TYPE

As noted above, The ArQuives collects materials in a variety of formats. Some of these materials constitute personal or organizational records created by a single person or group. Other materials may be catalogued within The ArQuives legacy system or other free-standing collections; these include photographs, books, monographs, music, moving images, audio, art, and artifacts. Press clippings and ephemera, when not kept with donations may be added to vertical files. Archivists can assist researchers in searching across collection types to identify materials relevant for their projects. Below is an overview of these additional collections with particular notes about trans content.

PERSONAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL RECORDS

When individuals or organizations donate materials to The ArQuives, any record—such as correspondence, memos, or financial records—become part of that person’s or organization’s fonds. Donated photographs, sound recordings, and material in other media are physically separated from the personal/organizational papers for preservation purposes, but remain intellectually linked and searchable. Currently, The ArQuives has nearly 30 sets of personal and/or organizational records with trans and/or drag content, with the Rupert Raj and Mirha-Soleil Ross fonds as the largest. These holdings are described in further detail below.

PHOTOGRAPH COLLECTION

Most photographs at The ArQuives document people and events at venues across Canada, with a good range of images documenting people and activities outside of Canada. Key holdings include photography albums of trans activist Rupert Raj, as well as drag performer Mrs. Wiggins’ (Robert Fortin’s) photo album.

A classic local example is the street photography of the infamous tradition of “egg-pelting” outside of the St. Charles Tavern on Halloween. During a time when cross-dressing was heavily policed, Halloween was one of the few days when it was possible to get away with being cross-dressed in public without risking arrest. The Charles St. Tavern was a central gathering place for revellers who did so, but also for other people who lined up along Yonge Street (Toronto’s main street), to gawk or throw eggs at those who were cross-dressed or in drag. Other holdings of note include photographs at the Manatee in 1974; photos in the programs for the various Imperial Court drag events; photo shoots for fab magazine; and photos of key trans individuals such as Leslie Feinberg, Enza Anderson, and Nina Arsenault. A large portion of the archives’ photographs represent drag queens in the GTA.

MOVING IMAGES

These films and videos contain a great deal of material (over 3800 within the legacy cataloging system) including documentaries, public appearances, entertainment, erotica, and instructional videos. Most of the trans-related film and video material was donated by Rupert Raj in 2006 and Mirha-Soleil Ross in 2008 and 2017. The Raj fonds include fiction and nonfiction trans accounts, and contain commercial productions that were designed to provide assistance to the medical community and trans people. Also included is a 1986 interview from Sally Jesse Raphael with three trans people, including Raj, and a variety of trans documentaries, including a Discovery Channel documentary from 2005, and Rupert Remembers, chronicling Raj’s trans activism from 1971-1990. The Mirha-Soleil Ross fonds include a comprehensive video archive of her work as a trans artist and activist, including a series of video diaries.

Outside of these large collections, another collection of eight oral histories documents the history of trans activism relating to the de-listing of sex reassignment (now, gender confirming) surgery in the late 1990s from the Ontario health insurance plan; these oral histories were conducted by Dr. Nick Matte on behalf of the LGBTQ Digital Oral History Collaboratory. In 2017, Dr. Elspeth Brown conducted oral histories with trans people about their family photographs; these interviews, along with the photographs, were donated in 2017.

Other videos in the Moving Images collection include mainstream media documentaries; instructional videos about cross-dressing produced by Paddy Aldridge, owner of the Toronto business Take a Walk on the Wild Side; footage of drag performances; and interviews with drag queens and similarly related events, such as the Latino Community Awards. Much of the video footage was produced by Anton Wagner and primarily covers people, places, and events in Toronto. Wagner's fonds also includes VHS recordings of trans rallies and demonstrations at Toronto legislative offices in the early 2000s, as well as trans health and Awareness Week events at the Sherbourne Health and 519 Community Centres. The collection also contains the Queer Liberation Theory Project, created by Dr. Nick J. Mulé in collaboration with Queer Ontario through Dissident Voices Productions. Interviews, oral discussions, and feature documentary feature 40 Ontario-based activists, academics and artists who engage in queer liberation theory and activism, including prominent trans activists and artists.

Video footage also includes coverage of events such as Transgender Day of Remembrance in Montreal and elsewhere, as well as of the Counting Past 2 Transsexual/Intersex/Transgender Festival, an international arts festival held in Toronto in 1998, 1999, and 2002.

SOUND RECORDINGS—MUSIC, ORAL HISTORIES AND EVENT RECORDINGS:

The Sound Recordings Collection includes an extensive music collection (LPs, 45s, CDs) and many audio (primarily cassette) tapes, of which we have several thousand hours; both of these contain a fair amount of trans material. Examples include 12 audiotapes of scholarly presentations on trans health from the 1985 Harry Benjamin Conference; the large donation by Robert Dussiaume, which includes fan newsletters relating to the performers, such as Devine; 1200 audio tapes from the Coming Out Show fonds. Some of this material has been digitized.

LGBTQ Oral History Digital Collaboratory,
Susan Gapka Oral History, Part 1 (2016).

ORAL HISTORIES

Oral Histories at The ArQuives are catalogued in the legacy and fonds systems; therefore the numbering structure will vary. Interviews catalogued in the legacy system are found in the Audio Collection, while video-taped oral history interviews are catalogued under the Documentary Moving Image Collection. Oral histories, whether audio or moving image catalogued in the fonds system, are found through their particular fonds, such as The Foolscap Oral History Project. Many of the oral histories have been digitized by the LGBTQ Digital Oral History Collaboratory and listings can be accessed through The ArQuives' digital collections website or on site at The ArQuives in digital format.

THE JAMES FRASER LIBRARY

The ArQuives' library includes roughly 500 books that refer to trans topics, about 150 of which are trans-specific. These are mainly non-fiction works such as memoirs and resource guides, but the collection does include some fiction. Many titles are typically found in other libraries, while some may be fairly rare or obscure.

The library also houses a significant collection of monographs, conference proceedings, chapbooks, and research reports. Many of these monographs focus on medical and therapeutic discourses or describe specific policy and advocacy projects. Of particular interest to researchers is the collection of final reports from the Trans PULSE project (Accession 2007-141), a community-based research project (2004-2013) that was created to respond to problems identified within Ontario trans communities regarding access to health and social services relating to housing, relationships, sexual health, hormone use, and other topics. The project was particularly interested in understanding the ways in which social exclusion, cisnormativity, and transphobia shape the provision of services for trans people.

LGBTQ2+ PERIODICALS

The ArQuives houses the largest collection of LGBTQ2+ periodicals in the world, aided by the efforts of long-serving volunteer librarian Alan V. Miller. This collection includes magazines, journals, newsletters, and other serialized publications. Unlike the book collection, the bulk of these holdings are extremely rare, despite the fact that several titles were widely circulated by North American and European groups seeking to provide resources and connect with other trans people around the world. They document the ways that trans people found each other and engaged in community organizing before the advent of the Internet. Many contain a great deal of personal and historical information, as well as evidence of the activities and activism undertaken by various organizations and groups when access to resources was much different than it is today. A great deal of information can be gleaned from these publications about events and places, key individuals, community leaders and organizations, as well as various historically significant issues and experiences. Because there was a certain expectation of how widely information would circulate in the days before the internet, many of these publications include quite specific information such as addresses, medical information, and other very personal details.

A list of trans-related periodicals is provided in PART II of this guide. Please note: many of The ArQuives' periodical holdings have been digitized by Gale/Cengage. They are available on site at The ArQuives as well as through subscription via Archives of Sexuality & Gender: LGBTQ History and Culture Since 1940, a full-text scholarly index. In addition, some of The ArQuives' trans serials have been digitized and are available through The ArQuives' digital collections site: <http://digitalcollections.clga.ca>. Finally, some of The ArQuives' trans holding have been digitized and are accessible at the Digital Transgender Archive, via a partnership agreement with the Collaboratory; see: <https://www.digitaltransgenderarchive.net/>

VERTICAL FILES

The Vertical Files have been developed over more than forty years and consist of more than 30,000 files on individuals, organizations and events, organized alphabetically within the country to which they pertain. They are divided into three distinct areas by geography (Canada, USA, and International). They have been created because The ArQuives frequently receives donations of clippings, flyers, postcards, and other ephemera that are not easily classified into its regular collections and for which there may be multiple contributors (e.g., not a single provenance). The ArQuives volunteers have also contributed to these files over time through personal collecting and clipping local and national newspapers. According to long-term volunteer Harold Averill, volunteers have been clipping trans material since the founding of the archives in 1973; there are over 600 trans entries in the notes field for the Canadian and American files alone. The Vertical Files are a rich repository of materials and researchers are encouraged to explore these files for trans histories. A list of personal names, organizations, groups, and events is provided in PART II of this guide and may be used to start your exploration of the Vertical Files.

RESEARCH BY THEME

Researchers may be interested in exploring trans histories across all of The ArQuives' collections.

Below is a selection of themes that can be starting points for researchers and for which The ArQuives has a significant amount of relevant materials.

INDIVIDUALS, COMMUNITY GROUPS, AND ORGANIZATIONS

The ArQuives holdings contain many items documenting key individuals, community groups, and organizations both within Canada and abroad. By exploring holdings under this theme, researchers can develop a sense of the names of people and organizations who have been central to trans history for many decades. Due to the large number of names and organizations represented in The ArQuives' holdings, this guide includes a list of key personal names and organizations, later in this document.

EVENTS AND PLACES

Materials that document events and places complement and further expand the possibilities for researching the contexts that shaped trans histories, experiences, community formations, and activism. The majority of items related to events include promotional materials such as posters, flyers, or reports. They may also include conference proceedings and photographs. The ArQuives' location in Toronto and volunteers' personal connections with local organizers has produced a good record of events that have taken place in and around the Greater Toronto Area (GTA), as well as venues where trans people have gathered, such as the 519 Church Street Community Centre or El Convento Rico, a club catering to Latino/a/x communities featuring regular drag shows and contests. Gathering places, both local and national, are also documented in the books and periodicals that The ArQuives preserves. Materials collected by Rupert Raj (whose papers The ArQuives also holds) document meetings, conferences and events that took place around the GTA and in locations in the United States. For researchers interested in international and cross-border histories, The ArQuives' International Vertical Files will be a rich resource. There are files on trans people and events, as well as organizations, in the international vertical files, as well as in the Canadian and U.S. ones. There are nation-specific files on trans organizations in Cuba, Mexico, and Argentina, for example, as well as files on inter/trans-national organizations, as in the case of Transsexual Action Organization, which was started by Angela Douglas in the United States, and later developed a chapter in Britain.

Historical information about key events and places are highly vulnerable to being lost, so archival records about them are helpful in recognizing that although they may have been very important or influential at the time, they can be easily forgotten or ignored if not preserved and explored. For example, the Counting Past Two international arts festival, organized in Toronto in 1998, 1999 and 2002, brought together trans people, activists, and artists from around the globe with support from many other institutions and community sponsors. This event is a strong example of how records documenting the event (including excellent video footage) can provide a fount of information on key individuals, such as core organizers Trish Salah and Mirha Soleil-Ross (whose papers The ArQuives also holds), as well as efforts and possibilities to organize conversations and exchanges that benefited trans people and brought attention to trans artists.

MEDICINE AND MEDICAL ACTIVISM

Medicine and medical activism are easily some of the biggest themes in trans history. The ArQuives' holdings provide a vast range of documents and items highlighting everything from individual experiences of health care, to major public efforts to address systemic injustices related to medical care. One example of when access to medical care became a major topic of public discourse in Ontario was when the primary government body responsible for health-care funding, OHIP (Ontario Health Insurance Program), decided to "delist" gender confirming surgery (sometimes called "sex reassignment surgery," or SRS) in 1998, leaving many trans people in a desperate state as the government simply decided to no longer fund surgeries, even for people who were part-way through a medical process. In response, several key activists, including Martine Stonehouse and Michelle Josef, launched various legal actions in an attempt to have coverage reinstated.

Both drew on human rights discourses and legal protections and became famous public figures and influential public advocates. Dr. Nick Matte, working for the LGBTQ Oral History Digital Collaboratory, did a video oral history project with seven of these activists in 2015; these materials are in The ArQuives' archives. The papers of Rupert Raj (F0021) include extensive correspondence with surgeons and other health professionals concerning their work with trans patients in the 1980s. The theme of medicine and medical activism is ripe for extensive further research both in the very recent and less recent past, and has specific links to almost all other themes outlined in this guide.

GAY/GAY AND LESBIAN/LGBT/LGBTQ2+ INCLUSIVITY

The historical relationship(s) between trans people (including ideas about what that encompasses), and the gay, gay and lesbian, LGBT/LGBTQ2+ communities (and what those encompass), is rich, complex, and sometimes problematic. Researchers interested in LGBT/LGBTQ2+ histories will grapple with the inherent challenges regarding inclusive language when navigating both historical terms and the very question of who to include in the category "trans," which is itself a recent term. Historically, the relationship between trans people and non-trans lesbians and gay men has often been fraught. The Rupert Raj fonds documents a rich history of trans community discussions about gay/gay and lesbian/LGBT/LGBTQ2+ communities throughout North America and is invaluable in that it conveys trans community conversations that include trans people who did not identify or agree with gay, gay and lesbian, or LGBT/LGBTQ2+ politics or community organizing tactics. On the other hand, many of the records regarding gay/gay and lesbian/LGBT/LGBTQ2+ community groups, such as Gay Alliance Towards Equality (GATE) and Gays of Ottawa (GO), and the Lesbian Organization of Toronto (LOOT) contain evidence of how these groups approached, thought about, included or excluded trans people.

DRAG

Researchers interested in exploring drag histories will find significant resources in The ArQuives; however, researchers are encouraged to consider how and when the term drag has been used to describe materials in The ArQuives' collections. There is no easy way to define a universal difference between trans and drag. The term drag has been used in numerous ways and contexts, only some of which might be considered trans, depending on one's approach. In some contexts or time periods, drag may have been considered a performance by cisgender (usually gay) men and women, while in other cases, drag may reflect the performers' trans gender expression or socio-political affiliation.

The ArQuives holdings can provide useful information for researchers interested in tracing its relationship to commercialism, fundraising, community building, and community. Drag performers have been an integral part of many fundraising events held to benefit various charities and causes, especially related to HIV/AIDS. The ArQuives has many holdings on this topic, including the various "DQ" (short for "Drag Queen") fundraising events that occurred in the late 1980s throughout Canada. The ArQuives' collections on Drag Kings are much more limited, but researchers will find resources in holdings including the publication Kingdom: Drag King Magazine.

PART II: A SHOWCASE OF THE ARQUIVES' HOLDINGS

PERSONAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL RECORDS

FONDS

Patricia ALDRIDGE fonds (F0183) [dates: 1990-2008]

The collection includes seven (7) videos on crossdressing and drag produced by Paddy Aldridge Productions (1990-1995) and including Chantall, Sky Gilbert, Don Cullen, and Jackie Loren; Take a Walk on the Wildside brochure and business cards (including Aldridge Art Gallery) and 20th anniversary printcatalogue (2008); Vol. 2, #4 (April 1992) of 'The Canadian CrossDresser'.

Coalition for Lesbian and Gay Rights in Ontario fonds (F0044) [dates 1974-2009]

Files related to Project Affirmation, including the PA questionnaire, notes on administration, insurance, and finances, as well as newsletters and notes on the evaluation committee.

Hilary CLARE fonds (F0047) [dates 1975-2005]

Personal records of Hilary Clare, formerly Christine M Donald, relating primarily to her work as a poet and her involvement in the Coalition for Gay and Lesbian Rights in Ontario (CLGRO). CLGRO correspondence includes letters from trans women asking for transition assistance, and email correspondence about CLGRO's trans policies and supports, sponsorship appeals from trans-inclusive conferences, as well as trans-related research inquiries.

Rachel Lauren CLARK fonds (F0099)

The fonds consists of records relating to the activist work of Rachel Lauren Clark and includes correspondence, newspaper clippings, programs, published articles, passes, baseball shirt, baseball, an award, and a metal printing plate.

SHOWCASE OF HOLDINGS: PERSONAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL RECORDS

Harold DESMARAIS fonds (F0012) [dates 1945-2004]

The collection includes photographs of Bill Cousintine (1943-1993), an NDP membership card for Cousintine, curriculum vitae, and a photograph of "Do You Like My Drag?" (Fruit Cocktail, 1985, Act II - Scene 8); and 2 copies (one with items tipped in) of "On Guard: A Critique of Project Guardian" London, ON: HALO, 1996. Correspondence, minutes, cards, and photographs documenting Harold Desmarais' activities with various groups. Gender EUPHORIA
The Journal of the Boulton & Park Society
A peer support group for transgender folk, their family & friends
February 1993 "We bring great things to life!" Volume VII, Number 2

THIS IS IT !!!
Fifth Annual Texas "T" Party
"Tea for Two"
In Less Than 30 Days !!!

...AND do we ever have a T Party for you! Our schedule of activities is jam-packed with informative seminars, shopping, great speakers, wonderful evenings, entertainment, activities, AND opportunities to meet old friends and make new friends in our community!

Where else can you find so many transsexual folks and their spouses/partners all in the same place at the same time? Just how many you ask? Well, as of the middle of January we had over 210 folks signed up and over 60 of those are spouses/partners. We're sure we'll get quite a few more folks registered before the "T" begins or at the door (we always do).

The Seven Oaks hotel is 67 percent full, that folks equates to only 63 regular rooms with double beds left. Don't be fooled and think 63 rooms is a lot of rooms, and you can show up at the "T" and expect to have a room waiting for you without making reservations! We have reserved as many as 8 rooms in one day! (You can do the math to figure out how fast those 63 rooms can go!) So if you haven't yet signed up for the "T" and/or made your room reservation with us (you can't reserve a room through the hotel), now's the time! Please mail your registration no later than the 15th of February so we can get it before the "T" begins. If you wait until after the 15th we can't make any guarantee on room availability—it'll be "pot luck".

Please do take a look at the last section of this newsletter issue for a synopsis of all the great seminars we have in store for you at the 1993 Texas T Party, and an updated schedule of events! Then on the last page, there's a Texas T Party registration form for your convenience. Just fill it out and mail it in to be a part of the largest convention for transgendered folks and their spouses/partners and families in the world! (The least expensive too!)

For your convenience during these last few days before the "T" we are going to try to answer the phone, (210) 545-5666, as often as possible at times other than our regular times on Wednesday evenings. If you are paying by credit card, you can make reservations by phone!

VERTICAL FILES AND KEYWORDS

The ArQuives maintains Vertical Files that collect clippings, flyers, brochures, and other ephemera about a particular person, organization or event. These reference collections are described at the title level only and are not comprehensive. They have been compiled by The ArQuives volunteers for more than 40 years and represent only the material that has been passively collected throughout these decades. The Vertical Files remain a resource for exploring trans histories and researchers are encouraged to visit the archives in person to review the reference files.

Researchers should also work with a reference archivist to explore materials across all of The ArQuives' collections. Below is a list of relevant names, organizations and events that have been referenced in either Vertical Files or in The ArQuives' database of holdings.

THE JAMES FRASER LIBRARY

The ArQuives' library includes roughly 500 books that refer to trans topics, about 150 of which are trans-specific. These are mainly non-fiction works such as memoirs and resource guides, but the collection does include some fiction. The library also houses a significant collection of monographs, conference proceedings, chapbooks, and research reports. Many of these monographs focus on medical and therapeutic discourses or describe specific policy and advocacy projects. You can search within the James Fraser catalogue at arquives.andornot.com.
